THE GREAT WHITE PLAGUE. How Fuberculosis Germs Are Destroyed.

Tuberculosis germs are scattered far and wide in the sputum which is coughed up by consumptives. One consumptive can cough up in a single day several billion of these germs.

When the sputum dries as dust, the germs are blown about in all directions to get into the air we breathe, and on the food we cat and the things we handle. In this way every person at some time in life probably gets the germs into his

To destroy these germs all that is necessary is to destroy the sputum. If the sputum is coughed into paper cups or napkins, these can be burned and the germs destroyed. Where spittoons are used, they should be thoroughly cleansed with a disinfectant solution like lye.

Coughing in people's faces or spitting on the streets, and especially on floors, is dangerous.
